To do a paid professional training or “little job” in animal welfare, preservation of the environment or winemaking, in Australia or New Zealand

Mrs/Mr,

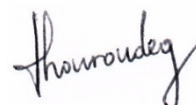

Your company...

Graduated with a Master’s degree in Biology from the University of Geneva (Switzerland), I am highly motivated to do a paid professional training (outside university) or “little job” in animal welfare or preservation of the environment, in Australia or New Zealand. For example, I would like to get involved in a bee conservation project, by genetics and molecular biology approaches, and file a patent or to take care of endemic animal species (kangaroos, koalas, wombats...). I am also willing to work in winemaking industry, especially in the Melbourne area.

Innovate in search of solutions to a problem is something that I would like to find in my career. My profile matches your job requirements (see resume). I would be thrilled to join one of your research teams, share their experience, their practice and their goals. I am available, mobile, fluent in English, open-minded to other cultures (student for 14 years at the International School of Geneva) and have a good knowledge of computers. I am also independent, flexible, reliable, enthusiastic and have a strong team spirit. I would be glad to meet you and answer any questions you may have. I am looking forward to your reply.

Yours sincerely,

Guillaume Thouroude
